

Abstract

Keywords are rhetorical phenomena, which evaluate and evocate emotional reactions in their actual use. Keywords also build the focus on specific discourses, which give an account of conflicts as well as reflective moments of particular groups in fixed periods. This dissertation reconstructs political, social and religious conflicts in the pre-reformational period on the basis of a lexical survey of keywords.